Did You Know that Nature’s Sunshine has been around for 40 YEARS & that Nature’s Sunshine was the FIRST company to ever encapsulate herbs?

WHERE Do YOUR Vitamins Come From, & What Is The REAL QUALITY?

Do you know where your Vitamin C is produced? Where are your favorite products made? Is it Mexico, Taiwan, China or India? Chances are many of them are! If you pop a Vitamin C from common drugstore brands, it may NOT have the quality standards necessary to make it REALLY WORK!

Not all vitamins and supplements are created equal. For 40 years, Nature’s Sunshine Quality and Purity Standards have been unmatched in the industry. This is because NSP manufactures its OWN products and controls every aspect of testing. The quality process starts with the raw herb harvested from the fields and extends through the manufacturing process to the finished products you use every day. Time and time again, we hear stories of people who have tried other brands, only to come back to Nature’s Sunshine because they just weren’t getting the results they had experienced with our products.

Adulteration and mislabeled products are documented in the food and drug supplies. Do you remember the pet food issue we had a few years ago?

Take a look at your Vitamin C bottle. Chances are it doesn't say where it is produced. Since Vitamin C from China makes up 90% of the world's supply, most likely yours comes from there. In fact, similar amounts of Vitamins E, A and B12 come from China, as well as over 50% of aspirin and 70% of the world's penicillin. Chinese pharmaceutical companies have also taken over much of the world market in the production of antibiotics, analgesics, enzymes, and primary amino acids. While there are some good sources that come from China, much is unregulated. 2007 -- Peter Kovacs, a management consultant to many large food ingredient companies, wrote in the Washington Post:

“Should we be concerned? That's what I've been trying to determine after I found out that, I too, use vitamin C from China. I didn't know that until I called my vitamin C company's office headquarters in the United States. When I learned from National Public Radio that lead-contaminated multi-vitamins showed up on the shelves of U.S. retailers, I started speculating about all the vitamin C from China. In China, leaded gasoline is still used in automobiles and is a major source of pollution, does that lead to trace amounts of lead in vitamins manufactured there? It's a possibility, depending on the production and quality standards. But how high are the standards? Apparently not very high — much is unregulated. For example, the Washington Post reported that “Europe narrowly averted disaster when a batch of Vitamin A from China was found to be contaminated with Enterobacter sakazakii, which has been proved to cause infant deaths.”
